DESIGNER OF THE YEAR PIERRE YOVANOVITCH

Parisian designer Yovanovitch might be associated with interior design and architecture, but he is better described as a master of form, material and space. Last year, the launch of his 'Oops' collection for R & Company demonstrated his charisma as a furniture designer, but it's also evident in his growing body of interior work, too. From a winery in the Douro Valley to hotels in Méribel, Zermatt and Comporta and private residences in Paris, Moscow, LA, Tel Aviv and London, it's no surprise he's in hot demand. There is an unmistakable confidence in Yovanovitch's work. He has forged his own path, deftly directing the skills of the many craftspeople he works closely with (and credits). He brings spaces to life from his imagination, not Pinterest, and hence they feel vivid in reality and don't just look good in photos. As such, he is one of the most intriguing designers of our times. pierreyovanovitch.com
